

Identification of Catharine McAnally's husband, Patrick Campbell, with an Analysis of Additional Campbell relationships

by
William C. Barrett, Ph.D.

Catharine McAnally married a man with the last name of Campbell, his first name was unknown. This was determined by her death certificate¹ in which her father was listed as John McAnally. Catharine was found in the 1880 US Census² in which she is found living with her brother Daniel McAnally as well her eventual son-in-law, Thomas Donnelly, who was listed as a bartender with the family.

Catharine was noted to have two daughters, Sarah and Mary J. Campbell². Thomas Donnelly married Mary J. Campbell in 1885 as noted by the application for a marriage license³ and the 1900 US Census⁴.

Catharine Campbell (nee McAnally) died 28 November 1906 and was buried in Old Cathedral cemetery at 46th and Lancaster Avenue in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, on 1 December 1906. Her brother Daniel was identified in her death notice as being deceased prior to Catherine⁵. The death certificate for Daniel McAnally listed his burial as also being in Old Cathedral Cemetery⁶. In addition, Thomas Donnelly and Mary Donnelly (nee Campbell) were also buried in Old Cathedral Cemetery as noted in their obituaries^{7,8}.

In an attempt to see if the family and possibly the unknown Campbell, were buried within the same lot in Old Cathedral Cemetery, a visit to the cemetery was undertaken. The resulting information indicated that Daniel McAnally held the deed to the lot. A transcribed table below indicates the people buried in the lot with interment dates.

Campbell Charles	9	13 March 1885
Campbell Catharine	3	20 January 1885
Donnelly Mary	23	16 October 1918

From the interments as well as death notices and U.S. Census records, it can be concluded that the Donnelly family interred in Old Cathedral Cemetery in Daniel McAnally's lot is as follows:

Name	Interment Date	Relationship
Donnelly Thomas	28 December 1929	Father
Donnelly Mary (nee Campbell)	6 September 1938	Mother
Donnelly Mary [AKA: May]	16 October 1918	Daughter
Donnelly Thomas	14 February 1894	Son

At this point, the remaining deceased individuals are either Campbell's or McAnally's. An analysis of the inferred birth dates of Daniel McAnally and Catharine Campbell (nee McAnally) with the other McAnally's is below:

Name of Deceased	Age (from burial record)	Birth Year from Records	Death Year
McAnally Agnes	15	1876	1891
Campbell Catherine (nee McAnally)	70	1833[fn], 1831[fn], 1836[fn]	1906
McAnally John	34	1836	1870
McAnally Daniel	63	1832[fn]	1895

As previously determined, Daniel and Catharine are siblings. An assumption from the birth year estimates is that John McAnally might be a brother to Catharine and Daniel having an inferred birth year of 1836, while Daniel was born in 1832 and Catharine had multiple dates from 1831 to 1836. No U.S. Census data or city directory has shown a John McAnally living with either Catherine or Daniel.

There is no evidence that Daniel married as evidenced in his death certificate which listed him as single⁹. There fore, it is unknown who Agnes is and how she is related to Daniel or Catharine given

9 "Pennsylvania, Philadelphia City Death Certificates, 1803-1915," index and images, FamilySearch (<https://familysearch.org/pal:/MM9.1.1/JDLN-RLN> : accessed 31 December 2014), Daniel Mcanally, 09 Mar 1895; citing cn 19014, Philadelphia City Archives and Historical Society of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia; FHL microfilm her birthdate is much later than Daniel, Catharine or John.

In addition, it is unknown how the remaining Campbell's buried in Old Cathedral Cemetery in Daniel McAnally's lot are related to Catharine Campbell (nee McAnally).

Returning to Catharine McAnally, all that was known still is that she married a man named Campbell. She lived with her brother, Daniel, and eventual son-in-law, Thomas Donnelly after his marriage to Mary Campbell in 1885 as mentioned via the 1880 Census. Thomas Donnelly listed his residence as 2500 N 2d St. Philadelphia, PA on his marriage license to Mary J. Campbell¹⁰. The 1893¹¹ and 1895¹² Philadelphia City directories listed a Catherine Campbell (nee McAnally) living on 2500 N 2d Street in Philadelphia, as the widow of Patrick. Thomas Donnelly was noted to be living at the same address in the same directories^{7,8}. Therefore, the evidence suggests that Catharine McAnally married a Patrick Campbell and together they had two daughters, Sarah and Mary Campbell who married Thomas Donnelly.

Catharine Campbell (nee McAnally) was widowed as evidenced in the 1880 U.S. Census¹. From the 1880 U.S. Census, her daughter Sarah was born about 1861 and Mary was born about 1863. The 1870 U.S. Census indicates a Kate Campbell with two daughters, Sarah and Mary was found Ward 7 on Pine Street in Philadelphia¹³. Turning to the the Philadelphia city directories, a Patrick Campbell was found living on 2210 Naudain Street (Ward 7) in 1864¹⁴, 1865¹⁵, and 1866¹⁶. No Patrick was found in 1867 or 1868 at this address. However, a Catharine Campbell listed as a widow of Patrick was found living at 2210 Naudain in 1867¹⁷ and 1868¹⁸ in the Philadelphia city directories.

This data suggests that Patrick Campbell died between 1866 and 1867. The Catharine Campbell in 1870 and 1871 is listed as a widow, no husband name but 2225 Pine is within close proximity to Naudain. The US 1870 Census is where we find the previously mentioned Kate Campbell with daughters, Sarah and Mary⁹. The evidence of two daughters of the same age, with the same names, together with previously identifying Patrick Campbell as Catharine's husband suggest that this is the Catharine McAnally of interest.

A search of Philadelphia death records resulted in the identification of a Patrick Campbell death notice for 1866¹⁹, about 3 years after Mary was born. The death return notes the residence address as 2210 Naudain Street and Patrick was listed as married. In addition, the return notes that Patrick was buried at Old Cathedral Cemetery - at the time known as Cathedral Cemetery.

Since Patrick is not in Daniel McAnally's plot, the next step would be to return to Old Cathedral Cemetery and determine who is buried in the lot with Patrick Campbell. The death certificate for Patrick identifies his parents as James Campbell and Sarah _____. It is worth mentioning that Catharine McAnally Campbell had a daughter named Sarah and she could be named for Patrick's mother. This data further suggest the identification of Catharine McAnally's husband is Patrick Campbell.

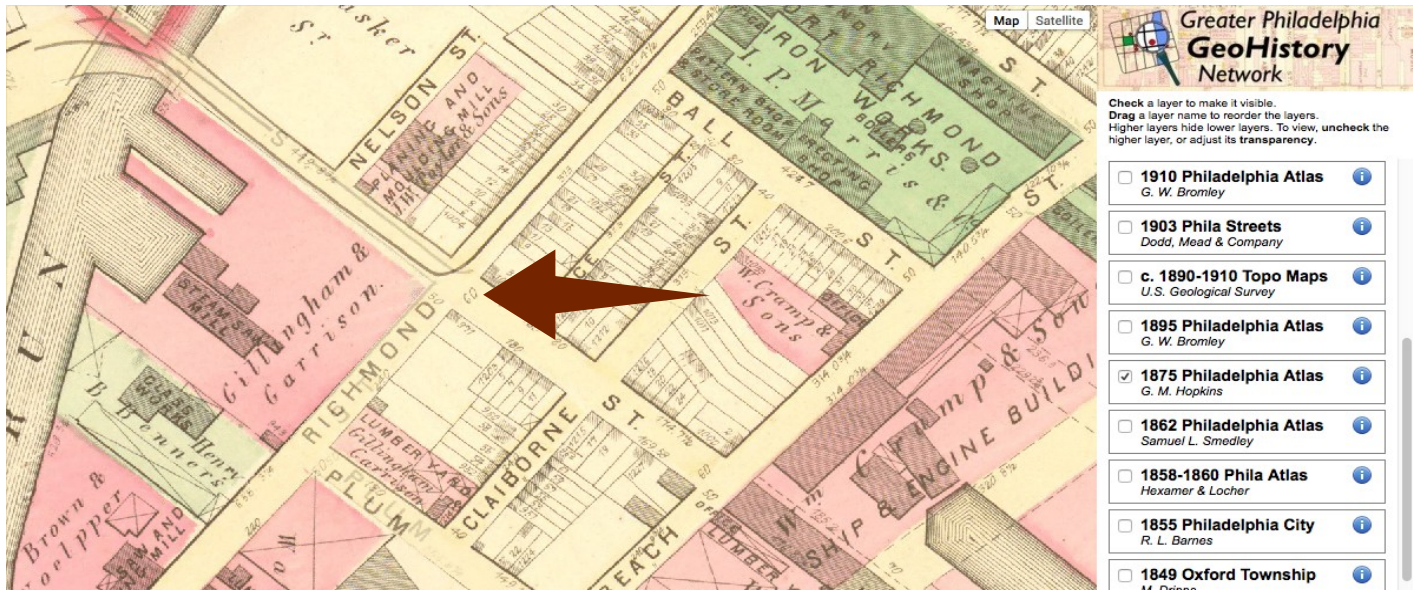

An analysis of City Directory data was performed to further link the Catharine Campbell from the U.S. 1870 Census to her being found with her brother Daniel McAnally and future son, Thomas Donnelly, in the 1880 U.S. Census.

Norris and Richmond is displayed below in the map, the red arrow designating Norris Ave. This location provides evidence that the Catharine Campbell, Daniel McAnally and Thomas Donnelly have been correctly identified.

Several questions still remain, who was Agnes McNally and how did she come to be buried with this family? Who are the remaining Campbell's in the lot owned by Daniel McNally? Is John McNally the brother of Catharine and Daniel?

Name of Deceased	Age	Interment Date
McNally Agnes	15	26 October 1891
McNally John	34	17 May 1870
Campbell Peter	71	4 October 1889
Campbell Thomas J	13	23 March 1874

No information has been found for Agnes McNally. A death certificate for Agnes McNally does match the date of interment²⁰. An address of 1521 American St. was listed. The city directories resulted in no Agnes, she was only 15 at death. Several Campbell's lived around American St. but the last was in about 1868, 31 years prior to Agnes' death.

Turning to the death return for Peter Campbell, he is listed as a widower, worked as a mill hand, and was living at 199 James St, Falls section of Philadelphia (Ward 28)²¹. A death notice search indicated that Peter is the brother of a Henry Campbell²². A search of Henry Campbell in the Philadelphia city directories finds several interesting discoveries.

A Henry Campbell was found to be living at 2210 Naudain in 1863²³, the area that Patrick Campbell lived with his wife Catharine McAnally. There are multiple Henry's throughout the directory, however focusing to James St., Falls section, Henry Campbell was found at 199 James St, Falls in 1885²⁴, 1887²⁵, and 1888²⁶. A Henry Campbell was found at 191 James St, Falls in 1882²⁷, 1883²⁸, and 1884²⁹ as well as at 201 James St, Falls in 1889³⁰. Focusing on the Falls section of Philadelphia, a Henry Campbell is listed at 105 Spencer, Falls in 1879³¹ and 1880³², 118 Spencer, Falls in 1881³³, 128 James, Falls in 1878³⁴ and 146 Queen, Falls in 1876³⁵. A death return was found for Henry Campbell, he died on 20 June 1889, was married and lived at 199 James St, Falls³⁶. Thus, this is likely the brother to Peter Campbell noted in his death notice.

A search of the city directories for Peter Campbell resulted in many entries. However one significant find was a Peter Campbell living at 2500 N 2d in 1884 with Catharine Campbell and Thomas Donnelly. Peter's age as ascertained from the burial information and death notice make him about 20 years older than Patrick Campbell, somewhat unlikely to be siblings but not impossible. Peter Campbell might possibly be an uncle to Patrick and thus, Catharine. There is no evidence to suggest this other than inferring from ages, being buried in the same lot with Catharine and her family and Peter living with Catharine.

Further searching of the city directories finds a few entries for a Peter Campbell in the area that Catharine and her family lived later in Philadelphia. Since Peter in 1884 was listed with the occupation liquor, a focus was paid to that in the search:

Name	Address	Year	Occupation
Peter Campbell	1508 Cadwalader	1860	liquor
	1320 N Front	1864
	1300 N 2d	1866	liquors
	500 E Dauphin	1880	bartender
		1881
2500 N 2d	1884	liquors

The potential conclusion is that Peter Campbell buried with Catharine and her family is related, possibly as an uncle.

There are now three names remaining in the plot that have not been analyzed.

Name of Deceased	Age	Interment Date
Campbell Thomas J	13	23 March 1874
Campbell Charles	9	13 March 1885
Campbell Catharine	3	20 January 1885

A search of the Philadelphia Death Returns find that Thomas J. Campbell was the son of a Peter Campbell and Bridget _____. The circumstantial evidence is that Thomas is possible Peter's son, buried in the some plot in the cemetery. Peter would have been approximately 43 years old when Thomas was born in about 1861.

Thomas Campbell's death certificate (d. 1874) indicated his parents as a Peter and Bridget. The US 1860 Census shows a record for Peter Campbell with wife Bridget and son Thomas in Philadelphia (17th Ward). Thomas is listed as 1 month old. A Thomas with a Peter is in the US 1870 Census (Ward 18, District 53) but Bridget is no longer found. Since Peter was a widower at his death this might represent Peter and his son, and Bridget his wife has passed away between 1860 and 1870. Thomas is listed as 11 years old. At the time of Thomas' death, the place of residence was listed as 1327 Mascher St. in the 17th Ward. This area was close to where Catharine Campbell lived later with Daniel McAnally and Thomas Donnelly.

A Bridget Campbell death was found in 1870 in the Philadelphia Death Certificates search however the address listed was for the Municipal Hospital.

Searching the death notices for Charles and Catherine both in 1885 indicates parent as Patrick and Bridget. No census for the family has been found. It is unsure how this Patrick Campbell and the Patrick Campbell identified as husband to Catharine McAnally are related.

Conclusion

From the evidence, it appears that Catharine McAnally married Patrick Campbell. They had two daughters, Sarah and Mary J. It appears that Patrick Campbell died in 1866, and Catharine moved to be near her brother Daniel McAnally. Catharine eventually lived with her son-in-law, Thomas Donnelly who married Mary Campbell in 1885.

Peter Campbell appears to be either a brother or uncle to Patrick Campbell and Catharine McAnally. He was a widower and his son appears to be Thomas J. Campbell.

The remaining relationships between Agnes McAnally, John McAnally, Charles Campbell, and Catharine Campbell is unknown. Potential hypotheses are that John McAnally might be a brother to Catharine and Daniel, no information to prove this has been located.

Agnes McAnally might be a niece to Catharine and Daniel, no information has been located.

There is no information to suggest who Charles and Catharine are, having the last name Campbell and being buried in the family plot suggests a relationship, possible as nephew and niece, possibly through Henry or even Peter, though no data has been located.

Summarizing the death information for Peter, Henry and Patrick Campbell, with estimation of birth year from the information:

Peter, d. 1889 about 71 y.o. Birth est. 1818
Henry, d. 1889 about 81 y.o., Birth est. 1808
Patrick, d. 1866 about 28 y.o., Birth est. 1838

They were all listed as being born in Ireland

Are they brothers or is Patrick a son of either Henry or Peter?

Family Groupings from evidence:

Patrick Campbell (b. 1838, d. 1866) marries Catherine McAnally (brother is Daniel McAnally)
Sarah b. 1861
Mary J. b. 1863

Peter Campbell (b. 1818, d. 1889) marries Bridget _____
Thomas J. b. 1861, d. 1874

Patrick Campbell m. Bridget _____
Charles b. 1876, d. 1885
Catherine, b. 1883, d. 1885

Henry Campbell b. 1808, d. 1889
Agnes McAnally b. 1876, d. 1891
John McAnally b. abt. 1836

Potential future analysis, locate the death certificates/returns and analyze parents and addresses relative to city directories.

Obtain plot information for Patrick Campbell at Old Cathedral cemetery to determine if any additional family is buried in the plot.

Re-analyze U.S. Census searches for Catharine Campbell, Henry Campbell, Peter Campbell and Daniel McAnally for clues. Map the known homes with potential others to determine likely subjects where the data is not clear.
